Damaging affects of the Earthquake.

The earthquake Tuesday evening not only created a sensation, but did some damage. It was observed by a one side. On came the iron horse, few pedestrians who were not particularly interested in the election returns that the electric lights were suddenly extinguished at half past 8. Among the observers was Superintendent Runkie. He went immediately to the electric light building at the foot of Twenty-first street and found that an accident had occurred to the machinery. From the driving pulley of the engine there is a connection of shafting five inches in diameter and divided into sections of 12 feet. These sections are connected by large iron bolt screws nearly an inch in diameter. At the instant of the earthquake shock one of these bolts was snapped in twain and the other bent out of shape. The whole machinery was thrown out of gear, and it became necessary to stop the machinery at once. Mr. 66E. B."
